Downing-Street, May 19, 1800.

*Riedlingen, on the Danube, Tuesday
6th May 1800.*

MY LORD,
THE Army marched from Donaueschingen the 2d Instant, and arrived at Engen in the Course of the Afternoon, before the Enemy had reached that Place. Notwithstanding the great Importance which was attached to the gaining the Position of Stockach, yet it was not thought possible to proceed so far that Day without exposing to imminent Danger the several Corps of the Archduke Ferdinand (which covered the March on the Side of Zollhaus,) and those of Generals Ginlay and Kienmayer which had received Orders to retire from Fribourg and Offenburg, and join the Main Army.

On the same Day the Enemy withdrew the Army which had till then occupied the North-East Part of Switzerland, and was opposed to the Austrians on the Side of the Grisons and the Voralberg, and brought the Whole of it towards Constance and Schaffhausen in the Course of the following Night, leaving the Eastern Frontier of Switzerland entirely open.

On the 3d in the Morning, this Force, united to that which had passed the Rhine at Schaffhausen on the 1st Instant, attacked and carried the Austrian Position at Stockach, occupied by Prince Joseph of Lorraine, with a Force under his Command quite inadequate to meet that which the Enemy had brought against him. On this Occasion the Austrians sustained a very considerable Loss both in Men, Cannon, and Stores; though fortunately a Part of the Magazines which had been formed at Stockach had been carried away in the Course of the Two preceding Days.

The Prince having been obliged to fall back on Pfullendorf and Möskirch, the left Flank of General Kray's Army was uncovered.

In this Situation of Things; and before the Archduke Ferdinand had effected his Junction, General Kray was attacked at Engen about Two o'Clock in the Afternoon by the Main French Army, commanded by General Moreau in Person. This Army had been reinforced by a Detachment from the Camp at Dijon, and consisted of Five entire Divisions. A separate Force fell at the same Time upon the Archduke, and obliged him to fall back on Durlingen.

The French attacked every where with the utmost Impetuosity, bringing up fresh Columns in Succession, and sacrificing immense Numbers of Men on every Part of the Austrian Line where they had hoped to penetrate. They were, however, unable to make any Impression on any one Point, and at Nine in the Evening they gave up the Attempt; at which Time the Austrians remained Masters of the whole Position which they had occupied in the Morning, and the Archduke had joined the main Army, after having defeated the Corps opposed to him, and taken several Prisoners and Three Pieces of Cannon.

His Royal Highness, to whose personal Exertions this Success was chiefly owing, has on this Occasion merited and gained the Esteem and Admiration of the whole Army.

At this Moment the Spirit and Confidence of the Army was such, that General Kray would in his Turn have attacked the Enemy, but for the Loss of Stockach, which rendered his Retreat absolutely necessary. He remained, however, in the Field of Battle all Night, and only began his March at Daybreak.

The Army arrived at Leiptingen at Nine in the Morning of the 4th, where it halted till Three in the Afternoon, and then marched forward to Möskirch, where a Junction was effected with Prince Joseph of Lorraine at Nine in the Evening.

The Archduke covered the March, in the Course of which His Royal Highness was joined by General Ginlay with the Corps from Fribourg, and by the First Division of the Bavarian Subsidiary Army from Baylingen.

The whole of this March was made, and the Junction with General Ginlay, Prince Joseph of Lorraine, and the Bavarians, effected without any material Interruption from the Enemy.

In the Afternoon of Yesterday the different Corps of the Enemy being concentrated in One great Army, whilst General Kray had still between Thirty and Forty Thousand Men detached on different Points, General Moreau attacked the Austrian Position at Möskirch with his whole Force, but owing to the steady Bravery of the Austrian Troops, and particularly to the decided Superiority of their Artillery, he was unable to make any material Impression, and at Sun-set each Army retired to its respective Quarters. The Loss was very considerable on both Sides; but there is every Reason to believe that the Enemy has suffered much more considerably than the Austrians. This Opinion, which is confirmed by the unanimous Report of the Prisoners made at the Close of the Day, is founded not only on the Circumstance of his not renewing his Attack in the Night or this Morning, notwithstanding his very great Superiority of Numbers, but on the Nature of the Action itself, which consisted in a Succession of impetuous but unsuccessful Attacks made by the French Infantry under the Fire of the Austrian Artillery, and exposed to frequent Charges of Cavalry.

Unless General Kray should be again attacked in the Course of to Day, he will, probably, take a Position this Afternoon or To-Morrow behind the Danube, his Left at this Place and his Right at Sigmaringen.

Your Lordship will probably have been much alarmed at the first Reports of this Affair that will have reached England through France, nor indeed can it be supposed that the Expectation of the Enemy should not have been extreme during the whole Day of the 3d, or that the French Officers should not have holden out to their Government the most flattering Hopes of ultimate and complete Success; but the steady Valour of the Austrian Troops, the Order that reigns through every Department of the Army, and the Skill and unshaken Courage and Coolness of the Generals has, I trust, under the Blessing of God, frustrated the great Designs of the Enemy.

I have the Honour to be, &c.

W. WICKHAM.

MY LORD,

Ulm, May 8, 1800.

ON the 6th Instant the Austrians took a Position behind the Danube without any material Opposition from the Enemy, whose Loss in the Battle of the 5th appears to have been greater than was at first supposed. On the same Day the Junction was effected with Lieutenant-General Kienmayer.

The second Division of the Bavarians passed through this Place Yesterday, and marched about a League further, where they will halt to Day, and their Junction with General Kray will be effected either To-morrow or the Day after, according to the Necessity that may exist for hastening their March.

The First Division consisting of Six Thousand Men had joined the Main Army in Time to render very essential Services, and was closely engaged with the Enemy in the Battle of the 5th.

The Swiss Regiment of Roverea in His Majesty's Service, under the Command of Colonel de Watteville, has formed a Part of the Archduke's Corps from the Beginning, and has been particularly distinguished by its Bravery and good Conduct; I am sorry to add, that it has suffered in Proportion, and that a Number of excellent Officers have been either killed or severely wounded.

It is impossible at present to obtain any exact Return of the Austrians' Loss in Killed and Wounded.

Though the General Officers exposed themselves on every Occasion, yet I believe not one of them has been killed or made Prisoner, and one only (Major-General Karaizai) wounded.

Few Prisoners have been made on either Side; but the Austrians were obliged to leave some of their wounded at Engen, for want of Carriages to carry them away.

No One Corps of the Austrians has been broken or dispersed by the Enemy, nor have they lost a single Piece of Cannon in the different Actions between the Main Armies, though several fell into the Hands of the Enemy at Stockach.

The Archduke Ferdinand, as I have mentioned in another Dispatch, took Three Pieces from the Enemy at the Time when His Royal Highness formed his Junction with the Commander in Chief near Engen.

I have the Honour to be, &c.

(Signed) W. WICKHAM.

Extract of a Letter from Captain Sir Thomas Williams, Commander of His Majesty's Ship Endymion, to Evan Nepean, Esq; dated at Spithead, the 17th Instant.

YOU will be pleased further to inform their Lordships, that the Endymion has taken from the Enemy

The Saint Joseph Spanish Lugger Privateer of Four long Brass Six-Pounders, Swivels, small Arms, and Thirty-eight Men.

El Intrépido Spanish Lugger Privateer, of Two Six-Pounders, Swivels, small Arms, and Twenty-one Men.

La Paix French Ship Letter of Marque, of Ten Six-Pounders, and Forty-four Men, from Nantes, with a Cargo, bound to the Isle of France; La Paix was built for a Ship of War and pierced for Twenty Nine-Pounders, is quite new, and sails fast.

After an arduous Chace, Le Scipio Ship Privateer, of Eighteen Brass Nine-Pounders and One Hundred and Forty-nine Men, belonging to Bourdeaux, Three Days out from St. Andero, had taken nothing; this Ship is quite new, very complete, and sails extremely fast.

When in Company with the Champion and Mediterranean Convoy, we fell in with a Portuguese Brazil Ship, deeply laden, totally dismasted and abandoned; this Ship, after considerable Exertion, was put into a navigable State and towed by the Champion into Gibraltar.
